LITTLE LILYBELL.

BY GERALD MASSEY.

[Illegible] flowers forget not the leaves
[Illegible] which her breast of glory heaves,
[Illegible] flame from Heaven's radiance
[Illegible] flowers or planet-dew wings
[Illegible] up—Life's not dark even!
[Illegible] world of sweet things—
Come little Lilybell!

[Illegible] to Air—oh, very fair!
[Illegible] eyes as like the day'n'
[Illegible] lights her world of care
[Illegible] wings of love!
[Illegible] be that ye will break
[Illegible] mate ye sell—
[Illegible] will not make such hearts ache,
Dear little Lilybell!

We tremble lest the angel Death,
That comes to gather flowers
For Paradise, at her sweet breath
Should fall in love with ours!
Nay, always a year may come and go,
Leave them life's mystic well
Unchill'd—but, sweet, don't flower chat! here,
In this little Lilybell!

Ah, when her deep heart fills with fears,
And aches with love's intense pain,
And pale cheeks burn through trippy tears,
Like red rose in the rain,
Then, sweet, even then, if we shall see
The night, and say 'tis well,
Since for Heaven's rule in her cheek,
Our dainty Lily bell!

Some rich Love made the lowly and
Some seem a flower left blooming
Oh, here we Love, and think that God
Is such a Love fall grieved!
Poor God! that gave the blessed trust,
Love, that all be well,
And more and more believe our dust,
For love of Lilybell!

CHAPTER VII.

SAND HILLS.

A little child, a trifler, she!
Singing, dancing to time!
A fairy thing, with red, roped cheeks,
That always finds and never seeks.
Make her a grave mid the hills,
As Silva parents eyes with light.
Coleridge.

Several miles from the manor of Lindenwalde, there is a hill not far from the sea coast, called the Hill of the Old Fields.

It has no striking features or beautiful, or in any way attractive about the place, unless it be the very loneliness of its aspect might be considered beautiful in that respect. The house was a small, square edifice of [illegible] with a single large door, and two small windows, one on each side of the door. Around it on all sides for a thousand [illegible] stretched a wide, barren waste of sand, [illegible] by the sea breeze into [illegible] hillocks, and [illegible] by the sea breeze into [illegible] hillocks, and [illegible] by the sea breeze into [illegible] hillocks, and

FOREIGN NEWS.

By the Steamship Asia, at New York, we have London dates to the 19th ult.

THE EASTERN WAR.—The news in regard to the movements of the Grand Armies in the war is quite important.

Prince Gortschakoff the Russian Governor of Vienna, announces formally, that Moldavia and Wallachia, will be henceforth occupied by Austria. Consequently the advance of the Austrian troops the Principalities commenced, has been superseded. But Austria has, subsequently, signed an engagement with Prussia and England, to insist on guarantees of future peace from Russia, and not to be satisfied with the status quo.

The Russians, at the last accounts, continued to retreat, and the Turks to advance, but there had been no more fighting.

There is nothing further important from the Baltic, excepting only a report of the destruction and capture of Bomarsund.

Two Cossacks, and some other buildings, were bombarded in the White Sea.

Sweaborg was not assailable by the 1,000 French troops have landed on the Isthmus of Perekop, the narrow strip of land which connects the Crimea with the main land. There is also a report of French Baltic fleet 5,000 men having been landed on the Island of Aland, at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia.

By telegraph it is announced that 1,000 French and Turkish and 400 English troops had been landed at three points on the Island of Aland, which fixed a subscription of £1,000 on the 11th. The forts were to be attacked next day. Sir Charles Napier was off Sweaborg on the 10th inst.

The Kreutzer publishes the French Government's refusal to grant an armistice, but that France and England had agreed to propose to the Conference at the Russian Protectorate over Wallachia, Servia, and Moldavia, and the Neutralization of the mouth of the Danube. Third, A guarantee of the Ottoman Empire, and the Independence of Greece, and Fourth, the Neutrality of Russia in the Black Sea. Fourth, No further Russian Preponderance in Turkish affairs.

Eighty Ottoman Turks are now stated to be in Washington. The source of the Danube from Ottoman to Galatz is stated to be in possession of the Turks.

Admiral Dundas and Prince are expected soon in person to the Government Dock that the Federal Government has ordered in a new exhibition.

The Gladiator has broken out violently at Yarmouth. Arrangements are in progress for the departure of Queen Christina and her family; but actual preparations have not yet been approved of. The populace seemed determined to prevent her departure from the country, and at least she should not be allowed to quit Spain until she had left her property.

ENGLAND.—In the British Parliament, Mr. Hume called the attention of the House anew to the necessity of taking still more energetic measures for the suppression of the slave trade, and said he was sure that Superintendent would be most successful in putting down the traffic.

Lord John Russell inherited that strong efeeling were tending in the Spanish authorities, and thought these efforts would be successful.

The Liverpool Mail says that the Government would keep a watchful eye on the Spanish ports.

The Liverpool Mercury says that it ought to be very wise and wise for nations to Hallet, Sir James W. D. Wood, Sir Percival Heywood, Sir Edmund Antrobus, &c., &c.

A letter in the London Times from Lord the Hudson Bay Company enjoy the exclusive use of the Hudson's Bay Territory, from 54 40 to Cape Spencer, near 58, south, by a certain agreement with Great Britain and Russia; and it is understood that Great Britain can found a claim to prevent actual occupation, and that will cost valuable portion of the Russian-American Coast, and therefore to an effective discovery in its manner to the United States.

The Liverpool Mercury says that the Government is disposed to accede to the request of the Liverpool.

An American bark has, of 400 tons, timber-laden, reached Liverpool, London, from Quebec, which had apparently been fixed into by 22 vessels from Quebec. It will start from St. John, N. B., on 10 W. She is supposed to have been attacked by a privateer and sunk.

SARDINIA.—The King of Sardinia was thrown from his carriage near Leghorn on the 14th inst., and was kicked by a horse, having his skull fractured, from which he died in half an hour. His Majesty is succeeded by his brother, the Duke of Genoa, who was married in 1842, to the daughter of the late Archduke Amelia Augusta, daughter of the late Duke of Leuchtenberg and Eugene, (sister of the present Queen Dowager of Portugal) by whom he had issue, one son and two daughters.

ITALY.—Fine prisoners have been executed at Parma, for having taken part in the recent conspiracy.

Selected Poetry.

WOMAN.

BY MRS. ANNA, MRS. HEMANS.

"Woman's heart!" Ah, what is it?
Is it a thing to be
Wasted, like the rose's breath,
Or the bee's melody?
Is it a thing to be
Given away, when first asked for?
Is it a thing to be
Taken, and then cast by?

Is it a thing to be
Trampled on, crushed, and broken,
Like the fragile vase that holds
The love-token?
Is it a thing to be
Sported with, and scorned, and driven
Like a child's toy from its hand
Into heaven?

Is it a thing to be
Played with, and then forgotten,
Like the dice that idly lie
Where they're cotten?
Is it a thing to be
Won, worn, and then cast aside
For some new conquest more
Fair to the pride?

Is it a thing to be
Leaved for gold, and sighed for,
Paraded, worshipped, then
Stabbed or divorced?
Is it a thing to be
Passed from hand to hand, like gold
Handled by every one,
Touched, bought, and sold?

If it be such a thing
As this, how can it be
That man, who is so weak
Himself, should claim from thee
Truth, honor, love, faith,
Duty, and meekness lowly,
Patience, submission sweet,
Devotion holy?

How can it be that man,
Who is so vile himself,
Should seek a heavenly gift
From earthly shelf?
How can it be that man,
Who is so false and hollow,
Should tear the pure heart
That trusts him—follow?

Oh! woman's heart is not
A thing to answer
Any of these questions we
Have asked of her.
Woman's heart is a gift
From God above,
And only they deserve it
Who prize love.

Pictures of Life.

MIRALDA ESTALEZ;

OR,

THE CIGAR GIRL AND THE COUNT.

FROM BAILEY'S HISTORY OF CUBA.

During the first year of Tacon's government there was a young Creole girl, named Miralda Estalez, who kept a cigar shop and resided in the Calle de Egenadores, and whose shop was the resort of all the young men of the town who loved a modestly-made and superior cigar. Miralda was very reserved, without neither or desiring flirting, and spurned the attentions of the fashionable puppet by her industry in the manufacture of cigars, and by the sales of her little store. She was a picture of rigorous health and beauty, with a finely rounded form, a young face, of red, brown hair, and a complexion might envy her. At times, there was a flash of laugher in her dreamy eye that would have astonished an audience, and then her cheek and lips were so dainty as to put to shame the most carefully-rouged belle. The first one that had a pleasant smile, or another if her words of politeness, and it is to a child a cigar or a Spanish song; but to none did she give her pleasant smile, except a young Pedro Montanez, a fine looking boatman, who plied between the Punta and Morro Castle, on the south side of the harbor.

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his station in society, accurate, and accomplished, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and would, no doubt, have been the favored lover, but for his fidelity and truth. He was a constant visitor at the cigar shop, and by the assumption of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick-witted capacity was often entertained by the hour by the pretty girl. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor, and many a life he had preserved by the rolling of a waterman from boyhood, or his skilled had done before him. Miralda, in turn, adroitly loved Pedro, and he as deeply adored her, and in the back part of her little shop, he had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his fair one. How and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would take a day and the proud of his skiff, and with a single attendant soon passed out of the city gates. But hardly had he passed the Punta, when a dozen boats would be seen with a volley upon him, and he fill a corpse upon the wave.

His body was quietly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, would, in a few days, receive his order on the pier and pieces, and, mounting his horse, rode to the Governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more cautioned before the Governor.

"Caballero," said the officer, returning the order, "it is executed!"

"Is the Count dead?"

"Excellency, he is."

"Proclaim, in the usual manner, the marriage of Count Alexander and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is by his legal widow, entitled to all titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the Doctor's estate, and report to this decision." Then, turning to Pedro Montanez, he said, "No man or woman in this island is so humble but they may claim justice of Tacon!"

The story furnishes its own moral.

LABOR IS HONORABLE AND AGREEABLE.—The philosophy of labor seems to have been thoroughly discussed as now; and the achievements of science continually modify the original ones. Man no longer gets his bread by the sweat of his countenance, infinitely diminish the sweat of the brow, and the necessity of labor to the mind, and the necessity of labor to the mind, and the necessity of labor to the mind
